experts at the smithsonian institution the smithsonian institution presents a uniquely curated collection of lively how to projects and historical narratives of four realms of american domestic arts cooking crafts decorating and gardening perfect for hobbyists interested in the historical context of what they create for their homes this beautifully illustrated book contains fifty diy projects from a uniquely american quilt pattern to on trend crafts like terrarium making and pickling that all offer satisfying ways to bring history and culture to life for those craving more features provide rare insights from smithsonian experts on prominent figures events and trends readers can learn about influential americans who ve had an impact on each realm look at visual timelines of significant events that pushed development forward or stay in the present and see how american arts in contemporary life is being redefined all while enjoying satisfying and unique projects

despite the passage of time our vision of native americans remains locked up within powerful stereotypes that s why some images of indians can be so unexpected and disorienting what is geronimo doing sitting in a cadillac why is an indian woman in beaded buckskin sitting under a salon hairdryer such images startle and challenge our outdated visions even as the latter continue to dominate relations between native and non native americans philip deloria explores this cultural discordance to show how stereotypes and indian experiences have competed for ascendancy in the wake of the military conquest of native america and the nation s subsequent embrace of native authenticity rewriting the story of the national encounter with modernity deloria provides revealing accounts of indians doing unexpected things singing opera driving cars acting in hollywood in ways that suggest new directions for american indian history focusing on the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries a time when according to most standard american narratives indian people almost dropped out of history itself deloria argues that a great many indians engaged the very same forces of modernization that were leading non indians to reevaluate their own understandings of themselves and their society he examines longstanding stereotypes of indians as invariably violent suggesting that even as such views continued in american popular culture they were also transformed by the violence at wounded knee he tells how indians came to represent themselves in wild west shows and hollywood films and also examines sports music and even indian people s use of the automobile an ironic counterpoint to today s highways teeming with dakota pick ups and cherokee sport utility vehicles throughout deloria shows us anomalies that resist pigeonholing and force us to rethink familiar expectations whether considering the hollywood films of james young deer or the hall of fame baseball career of pitcher charles albert bender

he persuasively demonstrates that a significant number of indian people engaged in modernity and helped shape its anxieties and its textures at the very moment they were being defined as primitive these secret histories deloria suggests compel us to reconsider our own current expectations about what indian people should be how they should act and even what they should look like more important he shows how such seemingly harmless even if unconscious expectations contribute to the racism and injustice that still haunt the experience of many native american people today an explanation of why some us cities are better at educational reform than others it relates education to politics showing how the whole village can be mobilized to better educate tomorrow s citizens it is based on an 11 city study of civic capacity and urban education organizations such as the sierra club and friends of the earth are familiar to anyone with an interest in environmental protection as activist groups they played by the same rules for years but in 1994 the rules changed with the republican takeover of congress environmental groups faced sweeping changes in federal policies that threatened the enforcement of environmental laws as these organizations intensified their efforts to meet these challenges they also altered their electoral strategies and political spending patterns this book traces those actions and shows what they mean for the future of environmentalism in the political arena while environmental advocacy groups have become bigger and better funded in recent years so have the corporate interests that compete with them for the attention of public and politicians the green agenda in american politics offers a new look at environmental advocacy that focuses on contemporary lobbying electioneering and agenda setting in this new context drawing on interviews with activists from a wide range of organizations robert duffy describes what environmental groups actually do when lobbying officials or the public he examines activity at both national and state levels to emphasize their growing use of websites email and action alert networks to conduct more sophisticated grassroots campaigns and he shows how they are devoting more funds to unregulated forms of spending such as independent expenditure issue advocacy advertising and public education campaigns duffy also tracks emerging trends in interest group politics and provides an overview of activism through the early 1990s he then documents the emergence of more aggressive action after 1994 such as providing campaign services to candidates and mounting voter registration drives he also shows how state and local groups have begun to play more important roles in the wake of the rollback of federal environmental regulations brimming with new insights into interest group lobbies in general and contemporary environmental groups in particular duffy s book opens a new window on the influence of big money in the supposedly democratic electoral process the contributions to this volume are introduced via a critical review of terms and concepts used in craft production studies today recent detailed contextual and technological analyses of artifacts from all aspects of complex societies have revealed interesting patterns that are difficult to conceptualize using a purely economic framework furthermore interest in practice theory and sociocultural theory in general has shifted some foci of archaeological investigation toward the social aspects of production and specialization
